

Teaching Philosophy

Jacob Morgan

EDU 373 01 00

Mrs. Leier

1/23/2022

The prospect of teaching is a driving piece of what I am to be. I have seen myself as becoming a teacher for some time and am driven to do so each day. That is because I see a full and proper education as a cornerstone of society today. Education early on can open the door for us to understand what we enjoy and could do as employment later and what we would rather avoid as we get older. Thus, being able to help future generations of kids find themselves and what they would enjoy in life is a true gift in my eyes. That is why I also see being an educator as one of the most vital employments that one can partake in. Society is always in need of educators for the youth; thus, teaching will always be a vital part of society. Teachers harbor the youth and show them their true potential and the overall value that they have. Thus, I value my future profession through maintaining true respect, honor, and discipline to assist the next generation to achieve all they are destined and capable to achieve in their lives.